

Eight Flying Birds Together for First Time in One Boston Nest

EIGHT HEROES OF THE CLOUDS IN REVIEWING STAND WITH GEN. EDWARD L. LOGAN AND MAYOR NICHOLS AT PARADE
Boston Evening American staff photograph of the eight men who blazed air trails across two oceans as they chatted in the reviewing stand just before the Yankee Division came swinging jauntily by. Note that the fliers did not pose for this picture, but were caught off guard, as it were, with Lindbergh and Chamberlin chatting to the two who flew the Pacific, Hegenberger and Maitland, while Gen. Logan and Mayor Nichols look on.

CITY SCREAMS WELCOME TO EAGLES OF THE SKY TRAIL

umph in automobiles over the line of march which the Yankee Division followed soon afterward, and as they passed—the air was shattered by a thundering roar of voices.

Through unbroken lanes of humanity, packed ten and more deep along the sidewalks, the air idols moved and upon them from overhead descended a blizzard of confetti and bits of paper.

The densest crush of people in Boston's history milled about the reviewing stand at City Hall when the aviators reached there after their triumphal journey through the city.

The eagles had met the Yankee Division in the Back Bay and now they were to review the marching troops. As they ascended the stand, the shouts and cheers became deafening. At their feet countless thousands screamed a greeting, and above them, from windows and fire-escapes, the roar from the streets was echoed.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, plainly thrilled by the warmth of the demonstration, stood beside the other conquerors of air and oceans as the Yankee Division swung past.

Boston never had a chance of according honors to so many heroes at one time and Bostonians, augmented by thousands from all over New England, sat loose and made the most of it, with enthusiasm unstrained.

With all eight ocean fliers together at the same time, in public view, the reviewing stand in School street was the great focal point of the entire celebration and towards it the crowds jammed. The undulating sea of humanity spread out in all directions as the YD boys, winding a tortuous path through the downtown city, headed toward the same crowd-surrounded spot.

A ninth hero, not of the air but of the unshaken land of France, joined the intrepid air heroes as the head of the parade reached the reviewing stand. Major-General Edouard L. Lohm, about to retire, received honors with the rest and the din of acclaim was for him, as well as for the fliers, as he was decorated by the Mayor.

Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, "daddy" of the 20th Division, came in for rounds of cheers, too, as he was saluted in the group on the stand.

Following the review of the sun-drenched troops, Colonel Lindbergh dashed to the airport to make his scheduled gateway for Portland.

Lindy Calls Visit to Hub 'Just Wonderful'

"Goodbye, Boston, and Good Luck. My trip has been one of the most pleasant moments of my career. It has been just wonderful."—Colonel Lindbergh's parting farewell to a Boston Evening American reporter.

time they will ever be jointly seen by cheering thousands anywhere in the world.

There are only eight "greats" in recent air history and these eight were here today before breakfast time. Commander Byrd, Bert Acosta, Berni Balchen, Lieutenant, Noville, Clarence Chamberlin, Mrs. Byrd and Mrs. Chamberlin, all arrived in Boston by train before breakfast time. Major Charles R. Harding of the Boston Board of Street Commissioners, Lieutenant Reginald Thomas, commandant of the Aquarium Naval air station, and Lieutenant Joseph P. Lynch, also of the air station, officially welcomed the group.

Lindy Sleeps Late

Two automobiles took them all to Commander Byrd's house, where Byrd, dressed in civilian clothes as were all the others, stepped out and begged them all to go for coffee but they left, to him him later at Mayor Nichols' official welcome breakfast at the Hotel Bellevue.

Meanwhile, "Lindy," who had left word at the Hotel Bellevue to be called at 6:30, so that he could go to the airport and superintend personally some slight alterations in the baggage compartment of his famous plane, was just stirring.

Because of weather conditions, and perhaps because of some weariness, too, he did not get up when called, but slept until shortly before 8 o'clock.

All eight fliers—two of them, Byrd and Hegenberger, Boston's conquerors at a breakfast tendered by the city at the Hotel Bellevue, with Mayor Nichols and other prominent men attending. Lindbergh drove to the Bellevue with Acosta, Balchen and Noville, who, after leaving Byrd's house, had come to the Hotel Bellevue.

Commander Byrd was changing from civilian suit of gray to white naval dress, when he looked from an upstairs window of his bedroom street house and saw a small group of reporters and photographers waiting for him outside on the sidewalk.

"Hello, down there," he shouted, waving his hand. "I didn't know you folks were waiting. Come on in and have coffee."

He went to the newspapermen and two reporters, and under Byrd's personal direction, muffins and coffee were served.

While waiting for an automobile to call for him to take him to the breakfast at the Bellevue, Byrd talked glowingly of his coming South Pole expedition and other matters near his heart and he warmly praised the newspaper for their enthusiastic support of his pioneer plans.

Through some mistake the automobile that was expected by Byrd did not arrive, and he accepted the invitation of the reporters to go to the Bellevue in their taxi. On the way, in front of the State House, a traffic officer held up the car along with others coming up the Beacon street hill, but one word from the driver about who was inside won a right of way, and Byrd was only a few minutes late for the breakfast.

As he stepped from the taxi, officers came out for a crowd of soldiers, women and children who awaited his arrival.

Historic Gathering

He was halted at the hotel entrance, while Mayor Nichols was sent for and then the Mayor, smiling broadly, appeared from the interior and said:

"Commander Byrd, welcome." They shook hands warmly and Byrd entered to join the others at breakfast.

Chamberlin and his wife, who had come direct to the Bellevue from Byrd's home, were accompanied by a New York friend, C. S. Allen.

The breakfast was perhaps the most famous occasion of its kind that has ever taken place in Boston, with all this city's long years of history and tradition.

The eight brightest luminaries in the constellation of aviation, together with Mrs. Clarence D. Chamberlin, sat down at the breakfast table with Mayor Nichols the host, and, like the Boston Tea Party of 1773, it was an occasion to make the world sit up and take notice.

Congrats mingled about the hotel and other crowds sought for vantage points outside, all the way from the hotel to City Hall, as the aviators quietly ate their breakfast.

As the breakfast progressed, the windows of tall buildings overlooking the Beacon were filled with other watchers, all eagerly awaiting the departure of the aviators from the hotel on their way to the reviewing stand in School street.

More than 100 policemen were straggling to keep the dense throngs in check as the breakfast progressed.

"Lindy" was in his real element on this occasion. Free for a few moments from the adulation of the public—though he was being spied upon by countless pairs of eyes from the hotel balcony—he dropped his reserve and laughed merrily as he talked with the other eagles.

While he was tossing back his blonde head repeatedly in gay laughter the elevator girls of the hotel were getting the best look of all at his much-admired profile, for they found that by stepping their cars half way between the first and second floors, they could see above the heads of the crowd and feast their eyes at will on the viking of the air.

"Oh, but he's wonderful. Isn't he a peach?" were words that were whispered enthusiastically here and there amid the throng.

Among those at the breakfast, besides the Mayor, were Frank R. Bond, Elton Wadsworth, Louis Kinsman, Donald Kneiss of the Guggenheim Foundation, which is directing "Lindy" tour of the country; Police Commissioner Wilson, Major General Clarence R. Edwards, Jr., C. Fraggitt, in charge of the trip of Maitland and Hegenberger. Three aviators who accompanied the Italian fliers from Washington—Porter Adams, president of the National Aeronautics Association; Captain Frank Wright, Park Commissioner William D. Long, Alexander Whitehead, Gordon Abbott, Charles H. Innes, and others.

While the meal was still going on Mayor Nichols was called outside and three engaged in a seemingly heated exchange of words with Herman MacDonell, secretary of Governor Fuller.

It is understood that MacDonell requested that the aviators be allowed to go to the State House in-

Boy 'Bums' Way to Town, but Fails to See Lindy

And Johnny hasn't seen Lindy yet.

Johnny Lipton, 14-year-old Fitchburg youngster, was as anxious to see the air hero that he "bummed" his way to Boston from friendly motorists, but just as he was warming his way into the crowd to see the birdman he was grabbed by a policeman from the Back Bay Division.

Tearfully Johnny told his story, and he was given a good meal by the kind-hearted cops, but he still insists that he wants to see Lindbergh.

And he is not alone in his desire to see the hero.

BOSTON TODAY OPENS ARMS TO EIGHT OCEAN FLIERS

Immediately after breakfast to have medals bestowed on them, but Mayor Nichols insisted with some vehemence in keeping to the program which called for the party to meet the 16th Division at Massachusetts avenue and there become the vanguard of the parade.

Mayor Nichols was heard to say "No," very emphatically several times. Trail of other differences between city and state in connection with the Lindbergh reception was heard in official circles.

The warmth of feeling evidenced among Col. Lindbergh and all the other aviators testified to the mutual respect in which they hold one another.

At one time during the breakfast, "Lindy" took out a pencil and drew diagrams on the table-cloth which the others studied eagerly.

Before the party was ready to leave the hotel an automobile was sent to South Boston to get Lieutenant Hegenberger's wife and children, but they had left home and the car returned without them.

In three automobiles, the group sped away from the Bellevue, through lanes of cheering people. They climbed through the streets to Massachusetts avenue and Commonwealth avenue where they met the 17th parade of sun-lounged troops.

During the wait after breakfast, Hegenberger and Maitland had been honored with medals by Governor Fuller at the Big House and now, as the parade was met and the review turned to Page 4, Column 6.

FRENZIED CROWD RIPS DOWN ROPES TO "JUST SEE LINDY!" Combined efforts of State and city police and National Guard troops were required at times to balk the efforts of the throng at the airport to reach the flying idol as he got ready to dare the dangers of the fog and rain in his audacious hop for Portland.

GONE WITH HUB'S HEART

"WELL, GOOD-BYE BOSTON, I'M FLYING!" Col. Charles Lindbergh bidding Mayor Nichols goodbye and thanking him for the cordial reception accorded him by Boston. His welcome was the most spontaneous ever given here.

UNTIL FOG CLOSED IN ON HIM, HIGH ABOVE, THEY STOOD Part of the crowd that stood for hours at the airport to give its last rousing cheer to the daring young winged god as he hopped away for Portland. Until the fog shrouded his silver "Spirit of St. Louis" and the rain came pelted down, they stood.

All eight eagles of the sky, with Mayor Nichols and military and civic dignitaries, occupied the stand at City Hall as the gallant 26th, heroes of the World War, swung by in salute. FANCY DIVER. Miss Esther Morrison of the Boston Swimming Association, one of the best divers in the country and a coming champion. She has defeated the present titleholder, Helen Meany.

RECORD for endurance was set by William Erickson when he stayed in Lake George swim for 30 hours. He covered nearly 20 miles. He will swim in the Wrigley marathon in Toronto.

BREAKS THE WAVES to win 220-yard breast stroke event at the Melrose swimming meet, which was the sanctioned meet of the N. E. A. A. U. She is the famous Katherine Mearls of the B. S. A.

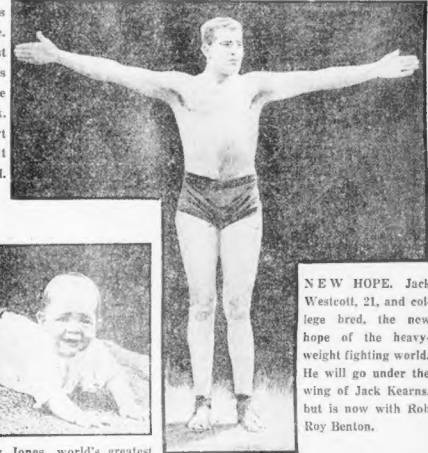

MAC SMITH of Yale, surprise winner of the three-mile event in the Oxford-Cambridge-Harvard-Yale meet in England. He beat the "unbeatable" O'Connor.

LIKE FATHER LIKE SON? Bobby Jones, world's greatest golfer, and Robert Tyre Jones, 3rd, of Atlanta, his youthful scion. Young Bobby knew his dad would win the British Open.

LAST BITE is the best bite. Anyway, Last Bite wins this race at the Empire track. Warm Heart is a short length behind.

NEW HOPE. Jack Westcott, 21, and college bred, the new hope of the heavy-weight fighting world. He will go under the wing of Jack Kearns, but is now with Rob Roy Benton.

JUST ANOTHER TRIUMPH. Bobby Jones, sensational American golfer, shown putting before a large gallery during his victorious round in the British Open, which he won.

BREAKS RECORD. Alaina Osipowich of Worcester, who broke the half-mile free style record in the Melrose swimming meet. She also won the 100-yard sprint.

LET'S 'EM SLIDE BY. Sammy Mandell evading a wicked right aimed at him by Phil McGraw during their fight which Mandell won easily, retaining his lightweight title.

Dempsey Sent Over K.O. When Referee Ordered Men to Fight

By JACK DEMPSEY.
NEW YORK, July 23.—It's a rather tough thing to win a fight cleanly and fairly and then to have some persons take the attitude that I went along to victory by paying the way with a foul punch.

As God is my judge, I want to say that I'd rather have lost the fight to Jack Sharkey Thursday night, than to have won it by a deliberate foul—or won it through the means of an unintentional foul that ultimately ended Sharkey's chances.

For fourteen years I've been throwing gloves in the prize rings. Through fourteen years I've fought 12 or more men and never once was I disqualified for a foul. I was a little something for my credit?

In face of certain critics, I say that the much that hit Sharkey in the body in the seventh—the one he makes about—was a right hander under the heart and in fair territory.

Jack O'Sullivan, the referee, was not an O'Sullivan when he said it was fair. A doctor examined Sharkey after the fight and found no evidence of foul. I understand the moving pictures of the fight show no foul punch.

Shouldn't that just about settle the controversy?

THERE are some who declare that Sharkey was growing weak under the body punishment I gave him in the fourth, fifth and sixth—and that Sharkey went out in the seventh with deliberate intent to try to win the fight with a claim of "foul" at the very first opportunity.

I do not agree with that. Sharkey fought me fairly and he fought me cleanly. He put up a game and splendid fight all the way through. He showed wonderful gameness and courage. He wanted to knock me out. He never really lost in his ability to do it. I can't see where he would deliberately try to win a false claim of foul.

If the punch that I hit Sharkey had been the terrific foul blow that for women.

Five very capable performers have entered in the women's 440-yard, free style race. Alina Opatowich,

Doris Chastrow and Helen Perry

all members of the Worcester Boy's

Club Auxiliary, along with Irene

Crehan, Metropolitan Swimming

Association, and Thelma Field of the Boston Swimming Association.

MAYOR WALKER SAYS

Decision Was Fair

New York, July 23.—Mayor James

J. Walker, author of the Walker bill which brought boxing back to New York State, said that Jack Dempsey

did not foul Jack Sharkey.

The Mayor's "reference has decided the issue," he added as an afterthought.

MEDBURY SAYS--

By JOHN P. MEDBURY. According to a recent survey, there are 100 million people in the world who are not reading. The motto of the Medbury family is: 'Never buy a book unless you can read it.' One fellow has been known to say: 'I don't read a book unless I can read it.' He used to be a very popular man, but now he is a very unpopular man. He was once a very popular man, but now he is a very unpopular man. He was once a very popular man, but now he is a very unpopular man.

New England markets as well as our shareholders in automobile and other stocks, together with the thousands of people who have automobiles and are interested in the Federal war tax repeal. You pay a war tax when you buy a car and naturally wonder why you should.

United States Senator David I. Walsh calls for a vote on the repeal of the Federal war tax. He has introduced a bill to repeal the Federal war tax on automobiles and other motor vehicles.

SENATOR WALSH

two tax revision bills since the war. I urged the repeal of these nuisance taxes as well as other similar taxes levied during the war. I was able to get a slight reduction in the taxes upon tires and parts, and even very near getting the taxes on automobiles substantially reduced.

"I am more than ever convinced that these, the last of the nuisance taxes levied during the war, should be wiped out."

Loren W. Taylor of Waban is one of the few graduates of the Boston School of Finance who has been successful in the automobile business. He has been successful in the automobile business.

Mr. Taylor plans to further study abroad of foreign markets next spring. He is now in the Boston School of Finance.

One recent source that higher lead prices were on the way seems to have been well founded. American Smelting & Refining, for the third successive day, has just advanced the price of lead 10 cents to 62 1/2.

At the same time we cited the threats of the Chicago Mfg. Co. and the Dwight Mfg. Co. to leave the city. We reported that the two companies had decided to leave the city.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately.

3. ly after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
4. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.

5. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
6. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

Pay Much for Light?

Never Mind, If Massachusetts Is Denied the Right to Fix Massachusetts Rates, YOU'LL PAY MORE

The Worcester Electric Light Company, which owes its existence to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, has appealed to the FEDERAL courts to save it from the Massachusetts Public Utilities Board.

Ordered to cut its rate from 7 cents to 5 cents per kilowatt hour, the Worcester company purposes to take the matter to the Supreme Court.

A decision may be looked for in about two years. Meanwhile, 50,000 customers will continue to pay the old rate, the company will keep two sets of books, and if the ruling of the State Commission is sustained the overcharge will be paid back.

The importance of this controversy to light, power and gas companies, to investors generally and to consumers, is only faintly suggested by the preliminaries. In Worcester alone there is approximately $420,000 a year at stake.

A general rule laid down by the Supreme Court is that under an amendment to the Constitution investors in public utilities must not be deprived of a fair return on their investment; that the rate base should be REPRODUCTION cost, "including going value, cost of financing, and organization, engineering and supervision expenses, less observed depreciation."

The Massachusetts board, on the other hand, holds that the rate base should be the actual amount of money "honestly and prudently" invested by the ORIGINAL takers of stock and bonds in the property.

The Worcester company placed its reproduction cost less depreciation—the Supreme Court rate base—at $17,837,965.

The State board, following its rule of "honest and prudent investment," appraised the investment at $4,058,232.

The company claimed an ACTUAL value of $15,000,000; wanted a fair return on that value.

The board found that, based upon the principles enunciated by the Supreme Court, the value of the property is more than $10,000,000. It established rates that would yield a "fair to liberal" return.

The company, according to its president, cannot abandon an item of such importance as the difference of $5,000,000 on which the commission "denies the right of the electric light company to earn anything."

The decision of the Supreme Court, upon which the Worcester corporation appears to rely in part, was made in a case originating in Attleboro and in effect denied the right of the RHODE ISLAND public service commission to regulate rates in a MASSACHUSETTS town served by a RHODE ISLAND corporation.

The contention of the Massachusetts commissioners is that the rule laid down by the Supreme Court does not apply to gas and electric companies in THIS STATE.

That decision reserved TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, exclusively, the regulation of INTERSTATE power companies.

How about current made "at home," within the State? In challenging the authority of the Public Utilities Department, the Worcester company is fighting the battle of larger and smaller utilities companies, everywhere. If the State board is overruled, you may reasonably expect to see YOUR bill go up.

The lines are being drawn for a great and memorable battle, such as has not been witnessed in these parts for nearly a generation.

Week-End Excursions

Must They Be AWAY from Boston, Exclusively?

Saturday and Sunday are quiet days in city hotels because the traveling man has made a bee line for home, to spend the week-end with his family.

Good for the traveler, hard on the hotel man. W. J. McDonald, the Boston realtor who was the chief individual factor in the development of the Park Square district, would meet this situation by inducing the railroads to run cut-rate week-end excursions to Boston throughout the year.

The Boston & Maine Railroad already has inaugurated such a service from points upon its own lines, but Mr. McDonald would go further. Out the "B. & M." puts on excursions to Canada; why not duplicate excursions FROM Canada? The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company carries excursionists to New York City and Niagara Falls, why not other excursions FROM these places? What Boston and its environs has to offer is well known, but it can be emphasized in printers' ink.

"Boston today," Mr. McDonald says, "has the BEST hotel accommodations of any city in this country. In the past, these accommodations were entirely inadequate; and it will take time to let the public know what has happened. Reduced rate week-end excursions INTO Boston, substantially the year around, will help and at the same time give these splendid hotels two of the busiest days of the week."

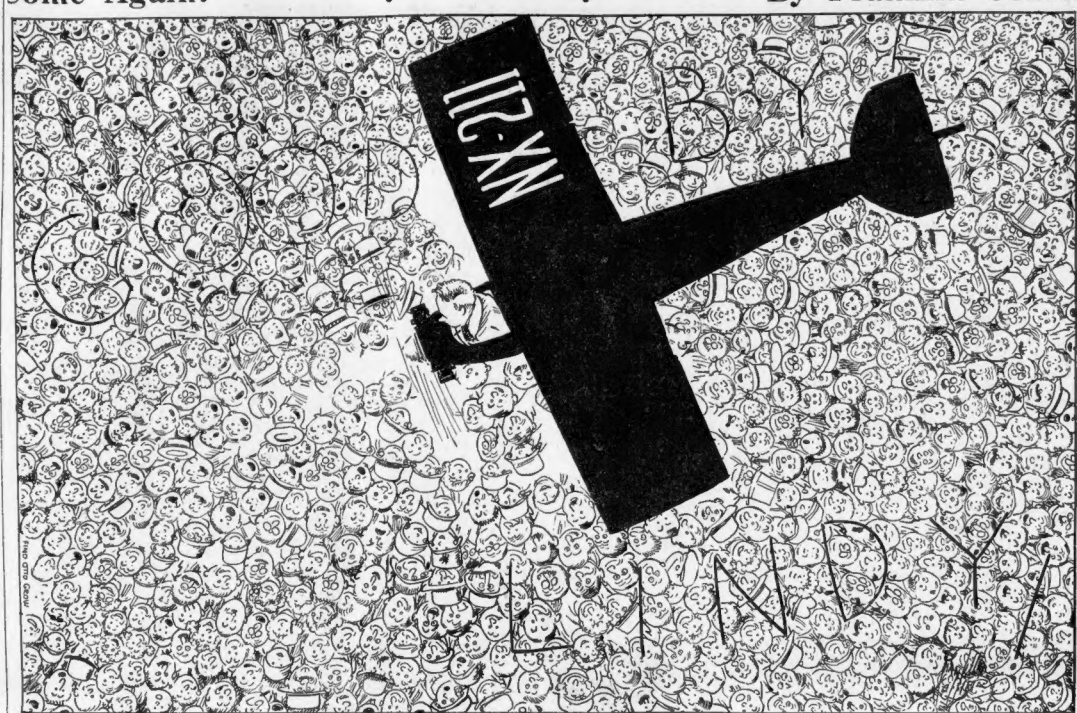

Why not?

Scientific Slant

The National League of Women Voters will spend $500,000 upon a three-year survey of the effects of prohibition, meanwhile reserving judgment.

Who was it that said the feminine mind lacked the scientific slant?

Come Again!

THE MID-WEST MAN IS NOT SO BAD

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE man from the mid-west is usually the goat of all the intellectuals.

Of course, a good many great folks including Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant have come from the mid-west, but the general impression seems to be, to paraphrase George Ade, that "the greater they are the quicker they come."

The mid-west is supposed to be the home of banality. This region is inhabited, according to Mencken, Sinclair Lewis and others, almost predominantly by morons. They are the people who form the favorite butt of almost all kinds of ridicule.

They are Rotarians, Kiwanis men and other frequenters of ruble clubs.

They are the hayseeds of the world. The main ambition of most of the people that live in the mid-west is to get away from the country as soon as possible. You can never amount to anything until you come to New York.

The mid-west has Chautauque circles, sitting descendants of former camp meetings. The inhabitants are low brow who come in for the contempt of all the emancipated and advanced Europeans and easterners.

Did they not put across prohibition? Did not their wives and daughters even go to prayer meetings?

What could be commoner? When the World War came, however, those boys from the mid-west, Kansas and thereabouts, did a pretty good job at Belleau Wood and in the Argonne. They fought well and the heroes of Balklava and Thermopylae had to move aside and make room for them in the Hall of Fame.

A Missoury boy named Pershing and a couple of Illinois men named Grant and Lincoln demonstrated that something worth while could come out of Nazareth.

And now another mid-westerner, a "dom" Swede, has startled the world. He took his life in his hand, shoved a tooth brush in his pocket and fled unaided and alone across the perilous Atlantic.

Personally, I think it makes no difference what country a man comes from. A Japanese, a Mexican or a Nebraskan is quite as liable to horn in and monopolize the front page as a noble Roman or distinguished Britisher. Man is man and you can't tell what part of the human race is going to develop a remarkable shoot.

Mr. Lindbergh, upon his arrival in Paris, was greeted like a King. In fact, the Kings of the earth, such as the Prince of Wales and the Kings of Spain, Norway and Belgium hastened to do him honor. All Paris was alive with American flags.

It would be hard to find a man that will turn up his nose at the exploit of Mr. Lindbergh.

Mr. Rabbitt's country, with its Chautauques and Rotarian clubs and prayer meetings is not such a bad place after all.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELISIE ROBINSON

HOW does the Modern Girl stack up?

She admits, herself, that she's the snappiest, cleverest, little article that the human race has ever produced, and most of us agree with her. But here's a letter from the Mann of one of them—

When my daughter was about sixteen she began taking me because I was old-fashioned. My husband and I were very poor when we were first married and got out of the way of fussing over myself, though we both kept up with progressive ideas. Of course, my daughter's criticism was good natured, but I could see that she didn't really think I had done much with my life or that the women of my generation were as smart as the girls of today. She often said she wasn't going to waste her life as I had wasted mine.

Today my daughter is twenty-four but I certainly don't swallow all her foolishness. I'm sure this talk about service is just an excuse to get out of work and get around. It is a constant surprise to me that she puts it over on her husband, yet he seems to be a bright young man.

You tell her, World!

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

LAST night we complied with the Mayor's "cordial invitation" to be present at the Arena where we, with the Mayor, Governor and a few other invited guests met LINDY. About 15,000 others were there also.

LINDY kept us waiting about seventeen minutes, although nobody left on that account. But when he did arrive the cheering had not subsided. Time after time all during the evening his audience showed it most certainly was not tired of cheering for C. A. L.

His Excellency's stressed education and preparation for ambitious young men. In a dozen other speeches LINDY had to listen to it all over again; what a brave, noble, courageous, simple, etc., etc., by each and every speaker.

Edward C. Johnson of the Chamber of Commerce urged his listeners to co-operate in promoting air transportation.

All during the evening the railroad behind the Arena cooperated with many, snaky, slow-puffing trains to the total score of fourteen. This was not too bad, as they might have chosen that time to start building a bridge there.

Every time we hear about a transatlantic flier we hear he has passed OVER Boston. Make the airport into a landing strip for better and these aviators will stop here and will start from here. And when they do stop here we will have something more than a man sandwich to give them.

Poor kid: LINDY looks as unaffected and unapproachable as any high school boy ever could. But he is a man in his own way.

There were the usual arguments between those prudent folks who arrived early and those who arrived late. The early comers had no reserved seats, but they got in as well as any. The late comers saw. Later, when we of the reserved arrived, we used considerable diplomacy to make them hop off.

One woman began to tell of standing and sat down in another woman's lap. Cries of "Officer, please," were heard. To the bare midship, Woman No. 1, intruding, and that was all there was to it. "Officer," said No. 2, "but you can't sit in my lap."

When we cannot act as we wish, we must use it as we can—Terrence.

The vulgar is content if he has fulfilled his duty. To the bare midship, he must succeed. He must succeed that he must exceed our hope—Voltaire.

Call for the grandest of all earthly spectacles. What is that? It is the sun going to rest—De Quincey.

Remember the deed, and not the deed. Would nap us in our utmost need—Longfellow.

This nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.—Lincoln.

Forever float that standard sheet! Where breathes the foe that falls before us—

With Freedom's banner streaming o'er us.—J. R. Drake.

I call my creature "happy" that can love, or that can exist in the sense of life.—Ruskin.
